A little bit about Kev & Perry...

These gorgeous boys were brought to the centre via inspectors after being found living in the most appalling conditions. Their coats covered in urine and faeces and lots of matts, they must have been in so much discomfort. They have now started their road to recovery and we now feel they need to start their search of their forever homes. They have all grown up in a multi dog household and sadly had no experience of the outside world, we are slowly introducing them to new situations and people. They are coming on great but things must be taken slowly as to not overwhelm them as everything is a little bit scary at the moment. They will all need understanding adopters who will give them the time, patience and love they need to adjust to living in a family home. Kev & Perry are both active little dogs and love being busy, they are ball mad and just love having the freedom to run around and play. Kev and Perry are still getting used to the outside world and some things scare them, we are slowly getting them used to traffic and loud noises. They will need a home with a secure garden for them to run around in and burn off their energy as it will be a while before they can be let off their leads. Although Kev and Perry are kennelled together they can be rehomed separately. They can live with other dogs and will need someone at home most of the time.
