A little bit about Emmet...

Emmet came to the centre as his racing days are over, he has hung up his racing shoes and is now ready to find his very own family. Due to spending all his life in racing kennels, Emmet can be a little nervous in new and unfamiliar situations and surrounding, it took him a while to get used to the floors and he struggled on the laminate and tiles. He is now getting used to life outside of racing and learning that his new life is full of love and fun times. Emmet may find normal everyday household items that we take for granted a little scary when first going to his new home, his adopters will just need to give him some time to adjust and show him the ropes. He can be a little shy when meeting people for the first time but once he knows he is safe with you, his goofy, affectionate side comes right out. If you have room in your quiet life for a sensitive soul who will love you with unmatched quiet intensity, come and meet Emmet, you will not regret it. He will love you with his whole big heart and be your best friend. Emmet is suitable to live with dogs of a similar size to him, unfortunately he is not suitable to live with small dogs, cats or small animals. He could live with children aged 14 years and over.
